This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1901 Excerpt: ...to care for themselves. I am certain that if every contributor to the funds of the Society could share with us who have to face this problem one or two sessions such as is my common experience, there would be greatly enlarged contribution to this work, and an absolute certainty as to its careful distribution. DOES MISSIONARY AID HINDER OR HELP? If by "self-support" is meant the maintenance of a pastor giving his whole time to a single church, then, in my judgment, the aid given through the Society in no sense retards, but greatly hastens, the date of self-support. If, on the other hand "self-support" means an arrangement for such frequency of preaching and such a portion of pastoral service as the church may be able to pay for itself, then aid from the Society delays self-support. Of course this question is to be answered in the light of the method of administering the missionary funds of the Society. If the church alone were to determine the amount of aid to be expended upon its field, there might well be fear that aid would tend to "pauperize" and greatly postpone its reaching a respectable self-support. But the fact is that not only such attention as I am able to give to each case, but the more vigorous and vigilant attention given by the General Missionary and the Convention Board, all of us constantly stimulated by a great anxiety to care for other and promising interests, could not allow a church to do otherwise than assume its full proportion of support for its work. A REAL PROBLEM. "What can be done to bring the churches which have long been helped to self-support?" There would be no difficulty about a question of this sort were it not for the suppressed assumption in it, which is, that such churches are now n...
