"Mel" Tumin (February 10, 1919 - March 3, 1994) was an American sociologist who specialized in race relations. He taught at Princeton University for much of his career. In 1953, Tumin challenged the Davis-Moore hypothesis of social stratification with his paper "Some principles of stratification: a critical analysis". Tumin took Davis-Moore to imply that social stratification was mostly inevitable and provided a positive function for society. He analyzed the arguments of Davis and Moore and found them wanting in a number of respects. In a reply to Tumin's paper, Davis stated that his ideas seek to explain inequality, rather than justify it. First Published in 1967, Tumin's book Social Stratification: The Forms and Functions of Inequality has become widely used as a textbook.
