This book is a photographic retrospective of the wild energy surrounding Telluride, Colorado...most especially the outlaw years of the late 1970's and 1980's, up to the present day. It includes images from the Telluride Bluegrass, Telluride Jazz, Telluride Blues & Brews and Telluride Film Festivals, and many local events reflecting Telluride's outlaw spirit, all captured by Ingrid Lundahl, a Telluride homegrown photographer and writer. It is an art/history/photo/fun book, hard-back, featuring over 500 black-&-white and color photos. "This is a magnificent book, sweeping in its vision of the most beautiful town in America, the magical box canyon where nature perpetually exhibits what Emily Dickinson once called the "far theatricals of day," and where the humans lucky enough to live there (and those smart enough to travel there) convene in some of the most satisfying and meaningful rituals this species is capable of." Ken Burns, filmmaker
