Brenda is caught in a love triangle between her ex and her fiancé who is a billionaire who loves to spoil her rotten. She does not want her to work and has her on a schedule that detects her life.

Brenda is happy with this arrangement but does not like the fact that he never sees her man. He is always busy on his phone and is always on the road. Out of boredom and fleshy desires, Brenda rekindles the flame with her old boyfriend Ryan, who is nothing but trouble. They see each other a few times and Brenda begins to question her love for her fiancé Paul. She loves Paul so much but she can't seem to shake Ryan off him. Ryan is the ultimate bad boy who has no spine but somehow seems to push the wrong buttons on Brenda no matter how hard she tries. He comes over to her place and walks around as if he owns it. He is always coming up with imaginary business ideas that he wants Brenda to fund. Brenda tries to search her heart and wonders why she cannot shake him off her. She tries to feel guilty about cheating on her fiancé but is blinded by the lust that she has for him.

Ryan comes over to her place severally and they hang out, fight and have sex almost every time. He is always looking for new ways to con Brenda but Brenda is slowly learning her ways and getting smarter, she compares his romantic ways to Paul's and wonders if that is the reason why he cannot truly let go of him.

She knows that she will get into a lot of trouble once Paul figures out that he has been bringing over another man to the house that he pays for.
